

<https://www.interiordaily.com/article/9808322/archeda-expands-the-tulle-collection-with-new-curved-end-units/>

Archeda expands the Tulle collection with new curved end units

Italian bathroom furniture brand Archeda introduces a new evolution of its Tulle collection, unveiling curved end units that expand both the aesthetic language and functional versatility of the system. The launch coincides with a milestone year for the company, which celebrates its 30th anniversary in 2026.

Characterised by fluid forms, continuous lines and refined detailing, the new curved terminals bring a softer, more organic expression to contemporary bathroom furniture. Designed as a natural extension of the Tulle system, these elements move away from rigid geometries, offering a more harmonious and enveloping presence within the space.

A key innovation lies in the curved end unit with a triple opening option, a technical feature transformed into a distinctive design element. This solution allows for greater compositional freedom and adapts to different spatial requirements. The inward-opening option eliminates lateral bulk, making it ideal when positioned next to walls or sanitary ware, while the outward-opening version ensures easier and more immediate access to the storage compartment. Together, these options enhance everyday usability while maintaining a clean, elegant aesthetic.

